PEARLING path

In 2012, "Pearling, Testimony of an Island Economy" became Bahrain's second UNESCO World Heritage Site, recognizing its millennia-old pearl collecting tradition and the globally significant single-product island economy and social system it produced. The serial nomination consists of 15 components: three oyster beds in Bahrain's northern waters, one seashore site in Muharraq, and nine clusters of historic buildings in Muharraq city. Together, these sites reflect the final expression and last remaining example of a cultural tradition that dominated the Arabian Gulf for centuries, pearling path is (41.0)km close to Raffles Al Areen Palace Bahrain.
